

Asking Someone to Play

	At recess and in my class there are lots of kids I can play with.
	When I want to play with someone I need to do these things: First I look at the person's face.
	Next I say their name to get their attention.
	I wait until that person looks back at me.

Purpose

Social Narratives can be used for early childhood to middle school students to prepare them for targeted events or situations. Social Narratives are an Evidence-Based strategy that can be used to:

- Address behavior difficulties
- Teach social skills
- Promote effective and appropriate communication

Types of Social Narratives:

- Social Stories TM
www.carolgraysocialstories.com
- Social scripts
- Power cards

Resources

- Module: Social Narratives - Evidence-Based Practice Brief
- The Watson Institute:
www.thewatsoninstitute.org/resource/s/behavior-stories/
- Indiana Institute on Disability and Community School: Visual Supports: Resources

Social Narratives

Definition:

Social Narratives (SN) describe social situations for learners by providing relevant cues, explanation of the feelings and thoughts of others, and descriptions of appropriate behavior expectations
afirm.fpg.unc.edu/node/589

Examples:

1:42 PM
kansasasd.com

Following the Rules

At school I work hard and follow the rules.
My teacher is happy when I do my best work and follow the rules.

Sometimes other kids will not follow the rules.
It makes me mad when other kids are not following the rules.

When I see other kids not following the rules; I need to be calm.

- I may want to walk away.  That is OK.
- I may want to tell a teacher.  That is OK.
- I may not want to talk to the kids that made me mad.  That is OK.

When I see other kids not following the rules, I may want to make them stop.

It is not my job to make them stop.

Bus Reminders

	Talk quietly
	Sit in seat
	Seat belt on Hands to self
	Listen to music
	Listen to adults